

Hillary Clinton	Donald Trump
<ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Hillary Clinton opposes so called “bad trade deals” like the Trans-Pacific Partnership2. Clinton supports the reauthorization of the Export-Import Bank to support US businesses abroad3. Main focus of Clinton campaign is job creation and raising wages, increasing prosperity, and creating job security4. Clinton promised to take China to task over alleged currency manipulation and unfair trade practices5. Clinton is not against free trade agreements, just against those that would hurt or outsource American jobs6. The Clinton campaign rarely, if ever, directly mentions free trade policies besides the Secretary opposing the TPP, making it very hard to compare to Donald Trump’s extreme anti-globalized view of foreign trade and economics	<ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Trump promises to use every possible presidential power to remedy US China trade relations by creating tariffs on Chinese imports if China does not halt illegal activities, such as trade secrets theft.2. Withdraw from the Trans-Pacific Partnership3. Instruct the Secretary of Commerce to identify every trade violation that hurts the American workforce and use any legal tool to end abuses4. Renegotiate the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), including ending Mexico’s tariff and VAT on American imports. If other nations are not in agreement on renegotiation, the US will withdraw from the partnership5. Instruct the Secretary of the Treasury to label China as a currency manipulator6. Instruct the U.S. Trade Representative to bring cases against China for trade violations, in the U.S. and at the WTO7. Appoint tough new trade negotiators to prevent American jobs from being outsourced overseas8. Trump’s trade policy can best be summed up in declaring American Economic Independence and an end to globalization